Angela Maldonado and the team at Fundación Entropika, Colombia

We cannot express in words how grateful Fundación Entropika is to IPPL and especially to Shirley McGreal. Our long-term funding by IPPL has been critical to the successful implementation of our campaign against the illegal cross-border trade of Amazonian primates. Furthermore, IPPL's campaigning has helped us to raise awareness of our conservation goals at an international level.

Fighting the illegal trade in primates has been our most difficult challenge, owing to the lack of support from (and sometimes even persecution by) the Colombian government. Only with the support of IPPL were we able to attend a Standing Committee Meeting of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species to denounce the trafficking of night monkeys for malaria research in the Colombia-Peru-Brazil border area.

Shirley's dedication and strength in supporting activists worldwide has been a source of inspiration. In times of persecution, we have always been able to count on her to help us keep on fighting in spite of adversity. We are proud of being one of the organizations supported by IPPL, and we hope to maintain our long-term relationship to continue protecting the primate community of the Amazon. Thank you, IPPL and Shirley, for supporting us always and unconditionally.

Roxane and Franck Chantereau and the team at J.A.C.K., Democratic Republic of Congo

For the last five years, IPPL has been a great source of support for J.A.C.K. The orphaned baby chimpanzees we rescued have grown into strong juveniles who need appropriate care and accommodation. Thanks to IPPL, our sanctuary has been able to build night rooms and open air playgrounds for our boarders. This is a hugely important step for J.A.C.K., as our main priority is always to provide these poor orphans with the best care possible.

Also, IPPL supported the construction of our Education Centre. Conservation goes hand in hand with Education, and, thanks to IPPL, J.A.C.K. is now able to make a difference in a country where respect for animals' rights doesn't exist! Thank you, IPPL, for trusting us and for loving these chimp orphans the way we love them!
